1) Dynamic Table Layout - Simple Example: The user can choose if they want to view by business unit or by region and the table layout will change to reflect their choice (aggregated to the correct level of course). I know that I could simulate this using multiple queries and multiple tables, but that is not very maintainable.

A dynamic library is loaded at runtime and not compiled into the client executable. Dynamic libraries are more flexible as multiple client executables can load a DLL and utilize its functionality. This also keeps the overall size and maintainability of your client code to a minimum.

c++ - When to use dynamic vs. static libraries - Stack ...

`dynamic_cast` only supports pointer and reference types. It returns NULL if the cast is impossible if the type is a pointer or throws an exception if the type is a reference type. Hence, `dynamic_cast` can be used to check if an object is of a given type, `static_cast` cannot (you will simply end up with an invalid value). C-style (and other) casts have been covered in the other answers.
